Thailand: Government leaders have reservations about the US bombing halt in North Vietnam despite their public affirmations of support.

Thai officials have expressed fear that the bombing cessation will lead to what they consider an unacceptable peace. [redacted] has underlined the dangers inherent in the halt and has stated that the bombing should be resumed immediately if Hanoi takes advantage of the cessation. [redacted] who has long argued that Hanoi will respond only to military power, has warned publicly that the North Vietnamese may now step up aggressive activities in Laos, Cambodia, and Thailand.
